

STALLED AUTO HIT ON TINLEY DEATH CROSSING

The Rock Island death crossing in Tinley Park which was the scene of a fatal auto-train crash only a short time ago in which a young mother and little daughter of Tinley Park were killed when the automobile in which they were riding was struck by a fast passenger train when the automobile stalled dead on the center of the crossing, was the scene of an almost identical accident about 9:30 o'clock Sunday evening. A car driven by J. C. LeHerault of Tinley Park became stalled on the east bound main line track of this crossing just as a fast east bound passenger train was approaching from the west. Mrs. LeHerault was riding in the car with her husband and both by remaining cool headed managed to get out of the car and to step out of the path of the oncoming train which struck the stalled car with such a terrific impact that it was literally torn to pieces. The engineer stopped the train and backed up to the scene of the crash and was happy to learn that no one was killed or injured. He did not see the stalled car until he was too near to stop. The railroad has been raising the tracks thru Tinley and the crossing is slightly higher. Wednesday, new planks were laid and a space between was filled with crushed stone and a mixture of sand and oil. The Tinley Park Civic Club and the Tinley Park Village Board have taken the matter up with the State Highway Department and the Rock Island railroad officials about placing concrete slabs on this crossing in place of planks and stones, thus making it a smooth and safe crossing. Oak Park avenue which runs over this crossing is a state road and it is expected that the state will do something about making the crossing safe.

The warning lights were working at the time of the accident, and Mr. LeHerault would have had time to get over the crossing safely had the car not stalled. The sound of the crash was heard for blocks and a big crowd quickly gathered.

LEGION CARNIVAL AT TINLEY PARK ON JUNE 23, 24 AND 25

The Tinley Park Legion Post No. 615 is holding an annual carnival at Tinley Park on June 23rd, 24th and 25th. This year the carnival will be held on the vacant property about one and a half blocks south of the Saenger Hall in Tinley Park. There will be no parade this year, but the plans call for a concert by a 50 piece band both Saturday and Sunday evenings. Plans are also being made to have a drum and bugle corps give a concert on Sunday afternoon. Bigger and better attractions are being planned for and a good time is guaranteed to everyone. Don't forget the dates.

FRANKFORT ALUMNI HOLDS BANQUET

The Frankfort Public School Alumni Banquet was held on June 13th in the St. Peter Evangelical church social parlors. There were about 190 guests present to enjoy the bountiful dinner. Members present included some from Chicago and Joliet.

An interesting program with Arthur Lambrecht as toastmaster was rendered. The string orchestra from the Joliet Township High School with Mr. Converse directing, supplied the music during the evening.

President, Albert Krusemark, Jr., gave an inspiring message to the class of 1939 to which the class president, Donald Oetter gave a very pleasing response. The guest speaker was Supt. of Will County Schools, Louis Bottino. A play that re-united the class of 1909 was enjoyed as it was an event of common experiences. The business meeting was held and the new work for next year was discussed. They decided on having an outing this summer and giving a dance this next winter.

The newly elected officers are: President, Herbert Folkers Vice-President, Mrs. Conrad Oetter.

Secretary, Miss Edith Wischover. Treasurer, Grant Geuther.

ROUTE 45 FLOODED IN GREEN GARDEN TWP., BY TORRENTIAL RAIN

A veritable flood swept the farm territory south of Frankfort in the town of Green Garden last Saturday afternoon when a terrific rain storm submerged many of the low lying farm lands, making small lakes of them. Route 45 was so badly flooded in spots that stakes had to be driven alongside the highway for a line to mark its location. Lights had to be placed at the flooded sections during the night.

Soft Ball Game

Don't forget the softball game tonight at Hayden's field in Mokena at 7:00 p. m. sharp. Frankfort is coming over and this should be a real hot game, the best of the season.

Will Hold Opening Soft Ball Game At New Lenox

Sunday evening, June 18th will be a big night for the soft ball enthusiasts of this section, for this night is to mark the opening of the 1939 Soft Ball season in New Lenox.

The New Lenox diamond located on the western edge of the village is well lighted and the opening game will be played here by the New Lenox A. C's vs. the Steger A. C. The New Lenox team are the 1938 Dist. Champions.

The opening game will take place at 8:45 p. m.

A preliminary game will be played at 7 p. m., between the New Lenox Juniors and the Married Men's team. Be sure to attend the big opening game.

ST. MARY'S PARISH OF MOKENA TO HOLD PICNIC, SUNDAY

Picnic Day Sunday.

The one big day in the year for many. Pa will wash the car, Ma will wash the kids and Katy will wash the dishes and will all pile in the car and go to Frankfort Grove for a grand old fashioned picnic.

Games and races for the kids and prizes to the winners.

Kitten Ball games, Mokena vs. Frankfort. Doctors, nurses and ambulances will be on hand for this game. Also a company of marines.

Dancing in the evening to the music by Roy Gordon's Band.

In the meantime all the fun and frolic except Sally Rand. The mothers got into her fan so she had to stay home.

Cars will leave the Rock Island depot in Mokena at 2:30, 4:20 and 6:30 p. m. If you don't care to drive don't stay home on that account.

Picnics are great fun alright. Why only the other day F. D. R. and the Mrs. took King George and the Queen on a picnic to eat hot dogs and I bet the Queen got some nice gooey mustard spots on her white dress just like the rest of us, only we'll have more fun. So come early and stay late and enjoy picnic day, June 18th at Frankfort grove.

FOLK DANCES TO BE STAGED AT COMMUNITY CENTER THIS SAT.

The Community Center Foundation of Palos Park of which Rev. Paul T. Sanders is director, will hold their first annual Folk Dance at the Foundation, Saturday afternoon, June 17 at 4:00 p. m.

A group which has been in attendance at the Foundation for some time and who have been practicing the Folk Dances will put on this exhibit of their art. There will be English and German dances in costume and also Swedish.

Outstanding in this event and program will be the presence of a number of Pottawatami Indians from the Dells of Wisconsin who will do their dances of their nation, one of whom Clear Water, will sing and dance. He is a beautiful tenor singer.

Miss Dorothy Robson will sing cow boy songs accompanying herself on the guitar. There will also be Scottish Bagpipe music.

All in all, this will be an outstanding as well as interesting program and is being looked forward to by many. There will be no admission, but all who come and who can stay are asked to bring a picnic supper and have a good time under the trees, where the dance exhibition is to take place.

Call Meeting At Mokena To-Night To Take Care of Revolutionary Vet's Grave

Friday evening (tonight) at 8:00 o'clock a meeting will be called by the Mokena Garden Club in the Mokena school auditorium for the purpose of discussing what to do about the matter of taking care in a permanent way of the grave of Chas. Denny, a Revolutionary War soldier in the Pioneer cemetery on the south edge of the village on Wolf Road.

The public is invited to attend and it is expected that a D. A. R. representative from Chicago will be present. This organization is keenly interested in marking this grave in a permanent way.

Frankfort Girl Is Awarded Junior College Scholarship

Miss Corinne Krusemark, daughter of Attorney and Mrs. Albert H. Krusemark of Frankfort was awarded one of two scholarships which the Joliet High School gives each year at graduating time. Miss Corinne was graduated last Thursday evening from the Joliet High School and this scholarship admits her to the Joliet Junior College for the two year term.

Miss Krusemark has been named by the Joliet Township High School authorities as an outstanding art student and she is now attending the Academy of Fine Arts in Chicago, competing for a scholarship there in the designing division.

Walter Herschbach of Frankfort Named Master In Chancery

Walter Herschbach, son of Mr. and Mrs. Otto Herschbach of Frankfort, has been named Master In Chancery of Will County by the recently elected Republican Circuit Court Judge J. V. Bartley to succeed Attorney John J. Wellnitz who has held this office the past six years.

Mr. Herschbach has been serving as assistant states attorney and is resigning from this office to take up the office of Master In Chancery.

Mr. Herschbach is a very fine and promising young man and his many friends wish him much success in his new and important office.

NEW LENOX COUPLE BACK FROM A 2500 MILE TRIP THRU S. W.

Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Whittaker of New Lenox recently made a 2500 mile trip to Fort Worth, Texas and points in Oklahoma, Arkansas and "The Shepherd of the Hills" country in Missouri.

Mr. Whittaker was a resident of Fort Worth, Texas about 20 years ago, but found a great many changes, some of the former neighborhoods showing a complete change. A young man with whom he used to chum, had entered the garage business, but when Mr. Whittaker went to look him up, he discovered he had moved two weeks before to Memphis, Tenn.

Mr. and Mrs. Whittaker visited a large number of points of interest in the southwest. Land values in certain locations in Arkansas were as low as $1.25 per acre.

MRS. W. MYRICK, MOKENA, DIES IN HOSPITAL

Mrs. Wm. Myrick, aged 55 years, of Mokena, died at three o'clock Monday morning in Silver Cross hospital, Joliet, following two major operations.

Clara Danziger was born in Chicago. In 1924 she was united in marriage with William Myrick of Orland township. They resided in Chicago for a number of years and located in Mokena when they moved here to live with and care for Mr. Myrick's aunt, the late Mrs. Mollie Jackson.

The deceased is survived by her husband, William Myrick of Mokena; two sisters, Mrs. Emma Kunst and Mrs. Pauline Delves of Oak Park and one brother, Joe Danziger of Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

Funeral services were held Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in the chapel at 124 Madison street, Oak Park. Interment was made in Waldheim cemetery. Services were under the auspices of Daylight Chapter No. 611, O. E. S., at the chapel.

The deceased was also a member of the Auxiliary of V. F. W., William Martin Post and Auxiliary of American Legion, Orland Park Post.

Bands Preparing For Third Annual Picnic at Frankfort

The third annual Band Picnic by the Tinley Park, Frankfort and Mokena school bands will be held July 2nd at the Frankfort Grove on Route 45, one-fourth mile north of Frankfort.

The official opening of the day's activities will begin with a massed concert by the bands of all three towns at 2:00 o'clock p. m. Several selections will also be played by each band alone. In the past two years people have come from near and far to enjoy this musical treat.

During the latter part of the afternoon there will be races, contests and athletic events for both young and old. The entertainment committee will see to it that there will not be a dull moment for anyone present.

The finance committee will award five or more prizes to the winners of certain contests, consisting of an electric toaster, mix-master, adjustable iron, table lamp, and a carving set. These articles have a total value of $75. You may be a winner of one of them.

Dancing will begin at 9:00 o'clock in the evening. The music will be furnished by Roy Gordon's famous eight piece orchestra.

Be sure to come and see the large and gorgeous display of fireworks. This thrilling and exciting event will top the day's activities and will begin at 10:00 o'clock. This may be your only opportunity to see a display of this kind around the Fourth of July.

Remember to reserve this date, Sunday, July 2nd. Admission to the grounds will be free, and there is plenty of free parking space.

Mokenaites See Royal Couple

Mokena people had the distinct honor and honor of seeing the much feted King George VI and Queen Elizabeth of England while on their vacation trip in the east. Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Swanson former Mokena residents now of Chicago and Mrs. Swanson's brother Gordon Benson of Mokena were present at the Washington Monument in Washington, D. C., when the King and Queen called at the same place. Mr. Swanson who is quite a moving picture fan, took pictures of the royal couple. Mr. Swanson says he will show these pictures in Mokena at some future date so all who care may see them. The Swansons and Gordon Benson made a trip of 2600 miles in a week. They returned last Saturday and were greatly thrilled with the trip.

Lightning Cripples Phones In R. I. Depot At Mokena

During a sharp thunderstorm Saturday afternoon, lightning struck a wire near the Rock Island depot in Mokena and put the company telephone system out of commission and burned a wire in two.

Miss Frances Gillett Is A Charming June Bride

A very lovely wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Gillett on Sunday afternoon, June 11th when their daughter Frances was united in marriage to Russell Lauffer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Lauffer.

An improvised altar was made beautiful with the use of palms, ferns, and baskets of peonies and mock orange blossoms. Thru the window just back of the altar, a glimpse of the green of trees and shrubbery made a perfect natural back ground for the whole setting.

At exactly three o'clock, the Rev. Mr. Chalmers, pastor of the Marley Community church took his place at the altar. Mrs. Walter Spiess, a cousin of the bride and Robert Gillett a brother, sang "I Love You Truly" and then as the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march sounded forth, played by Mrs. Walter Spiess the bride, preceded by her bridesmaid, Alma Handorf, a cousin of the groom, descended the stairs where she was met by her father.

Proceeding to the altar they were met by the groom and his best man, Harwood Stellwagen. The service was a beautiful and unusual one as the couple exchanged their vows, using the double ring ceremony.

The bride was especially charming in a gown of white taffetta of floor length made in simple, girlish fashion. She wore a finger tip veil caught in a wreath of orange blossoms, and carried an arm bouquet of calla lilies and feverfew.

For the something old, she wore a cameo pin which had belonged to the groom's mother and also a necklace owned by her cousin, Mrs. Harry Storm.

The bride's maid was attired in a floor length green silk lace dress and carried talisman roses.

Mrs. Gillett and Mrs. Lauffer wore corsages of sweet peas.

Following the ceremony, a wedding luncheon was served to about fifty friends and relatives. Those assisting in the dining room were: Agnes Haley, Virginia Sass, Bernice Hostert and Clara Bush.

Mr. and Mrs. Lauffer left, following the wedding on a motor trip which will take them thru many western states. They will visit with Mrs. Lauffer's aunt, Mrs. Will Holmes in Utah and her uncle, Robert Gillett in Idaho.

The bride is wearing a white suit and white hat with white accessories. The happy couple were the recipients of many lovely gifts. They have a host of friends who extend to them the heartiest congratulations and best wishes.

Upon their return, they will live on a farm northeast of Marley.

"Ticklish Business" Attracts Big Crowd

"Ticklish Business", given by the Orland Park Woman's Club, opened last night to a capacity audience. The show moved along evenly, without a hitch, and is to continue tonight and Saturday night.

The cast showed that they had spent long hours in rehearsals, under the personal direction of Chic Perkins-King, and those in the cast especially noticed as stand-outs, were the characters of "Merry Garden" and "Sarah Adams", though we might name every character in the cast as putting on a brilliant performance.

The show "Ticklish Business" is considered one of the finest ever

DEATH COMES TO MRS. B. MAGER OF FRANKFORT

Mrs. Ben Mager nee Kampe aged 52 years, died in her home in Frankfort on June 10. Mrs. Mager had been in poor health for many years. She was an individual nevertheless who carried her cross without complaining.

She was confirmed and married in the Green Garden church.

She leaves to mourn her loss her husband, Ben Mager, one son Le-Roy who is a member of the Mager and Mark store in Frankfort and her aged mother Mrs. Anna Kampe; two brothers, Fred of Chicago Heights, William of Frankfort; two sisters, Mrs. Anna Heusner and Mrs. Charlotte Folkers, both of Frankfort.

Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock from the late home thence to the St. Peter Evangelical and Reformed church. The large edifice was filled to capacity by the great throng of mourners. The service was in charge of the Rev. Mr. Bloesch of the Monee Evangelical church in the absence of Rev. G. S. Gerhold. The floral offerings were profuse and very beautiful.

Burial was made in the Pleasant Hill Cemetery at Frankfort.

Mr. Mager is a member of the firm of Heusner & Mager in Frankfort engaged in the automobile and implement business.

Mokena Garden Club 10 Years Old

The Mokena Garden club celebrated its 10th anniversary on June 6 at a pot luck dinner which was held in the lovely woods adjoining the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gunhouse.

Everyone was in high spirits because of the joyous occasion and the ideal weather. Mrs. A. Benson, the club president, read two lovely poems which were very appropriate for the occasion. Mrs. A. Braun entertained delightfully as well as she instructed everyone by reading the contents of the first year book of the club. The charter members were justly proud and the newer members filled with admiration for the loyalty with which the club has adhered to its principles.

All the charter members were assigned the task of composing a book which will contain the history of the Mokena Garden Club.

Mrs. McGregor and Mrs. Frank Hirsch were welcomed as new members.

The Garden Club is giving away Iris of different colors to anyone in the community. Please get in touch with either Mrs. Walter Yunker, Mrs. A. Braun or Mrs. A. Benson if you wish to have some of these flow ers.

Postpone Picnic

The annual picnic of the Green Garden Methodist church which was to have been held at the Andres Grove, has been postponed to Tuesday of next week.

CHAPTER I

The morning was pleasantly cool and the bed was comfortable so that when the first knock sounded on the oak panels of the door Kay Forrest burrowed more deeply into the pillows, pressed her young body closer against the mattress and sleepily tried to ignore the summons.

For a brief ecstatic moment the girl dropped off again into a deep sleep, but this time the knock at the door was more insistent and a woman's voice came to her, determined but carefully subdued so that the other members of the household would not be disturbed. It was Miss Maynard's voice, and somehow, perfectly modulated as it was, one could not hear that voice and believe that Miss Maynard ever failed of having her way. This time she said, "Five o'clock, Kay."

Kay Forrest threw off the sheet which covered her. She called to the unseen person, "All right, Miss Maynard, I'll be right down." She walked across the room in her bare feet, poured water from an ancient china pitcher into an equally ancient wash-bowl, dipped her hands in the crystal fluid, splashed water plentifully on her face, laved slender throat and soft, white shoulders; shivered, and finally succeeded in opening wide her sleep-laden eyes.

She sat on a chair—a dignified old chair upholstered in red—and drew silk stockings over firm young legs. She slipped her feet into shoes ridiculously small. Then she walked to the window and for just a few moments stood looking down upon the haze which hung over the Gardens.

Cathedral Gardens at dawn! Gray shot through with crimson and yellow and the delicate white of young blossoms. Cypress trees with brownish gray trunks rising from lagoons of onyx. Overhead a canopy of gray Spanish moss casting deep shadows. It was very black there under the cypress trees; black as midnight, save where here and there the girl's keen young eyes could discern a splash of brilliance; the brilliance of sub-tropical flowers.

Beyond the Gardens lay the grim waste which was called Little Moccasin Swamp; ugly and forbidding. Yet from that waste these Gardens had been claimed—Gardens of such exquisite beauty that the girl at the upstairs window forgot that she had been sleepy, forgot that her whole nineteen years of life had been spent within six miles of this spot, forgot everything save that here Nature and man had collaborated to produce a place of such exquisite beauty that it was always new and always overwhelming.

Reluctantly, Kay moved away from the window. A minute later, clad in a simple dress of light blue, she tiptoed into the hallway and down the steps. Miss Christine Maynard was waiting in the dining-room. Miss Maynard said, "The coffee's ready, Kay. And we'll have to hurry."

Kay glanced at her companion over the rim of her coffee-cup. Miss Maynard now . . . well, she wasn't pretty. Somehow, you had to think of her as efficient. Just that. Thirty-eight—and Miss Maynard admitted it honestly and somewhat defiantly—immaculately tailored even at this absurdly young hour; black hair meticulously arranged, light tweed suit seeming as though just to have escaped from the pressing iron, brown eyes cool and observing, voice sharp but kindly. That was Christine Maynard of New York; Christine Maynard, spinster, who was by profession an art photographer and by nature a thwarted mother. Christine Maynard who was spending weeks at Cathedral Gardens making photographic studies.

They were utterly different, these two; Kay, just half Miss Maynard's age, possessing a buoyancy and freshness and vivid beauty which Miss Maynard lacked and envied. But then Kay envied the older woman her poise, her certainty, her assured sophistication. And between them there was this in common: that beauty, such beauty as lay just beyond the door, overpowered them; that they could look at each other with the certain knowledge that another pair of eyes was seeing what theirs was seeing, that another brain was translating it into the same emotional reaction.

They walked from the house to the edge of what had once been part of the swamp; Kay Forrest helping Miss Maynard with her bulky photographic equipment. This was stowed in half of the middle seat of a dun-colored bateau which was hitched informally to an oak post with a bit of thin rope. Miss Maynard sat with her camera on this seat and relaxed, after a fashion, against the high back.

Dating back before Kay's birth, the South had been blessed with spots of beauty so outstanding as to place them on a plane above mere loveliness. There was the famous Azalea Trail of Mobile, and certain places in the coastal country of South Carolina and Georgia where Nature had concentrated its generosity. And these spots came to be known as Gardens, though some of them extended for miles and some were reckoned in acres.

In most instances, Nature had begun the work by providing a luxury of bloom and color more intense than average. Then man had developed and organized this beauty. Where hundreds of bushes blazed with a riot of color, thousands more had been planted. The work had been done artistically, so that there were breath-taking vistas of blossoms. There were gardens which were formal and some which were informal. All were astonishingly, unbelievably, beautiful.

And years ago the first tourists, returning from winter vacations in Florida, had discovered these places which southerners had taken for granted. The fame of the various Gardens spread and became national, then international. Good roads were built so that the Gardens could be visited comfortably, railroads inaugurated excursions during the season of greatest floral perfection. Old families responded to the sudden popularity of their places by cultivating them with greater care and expertness, and by charging admission fees to strangers.

And it was this custom which had given one woman a vision beyond any other vision which the South had known. To Ruth Hamilton had come the idea of snatching from the gray waste of the swamp a few hundred acres, and of creating beauty where there had been only grim ugliness. The work had been long and arduous, but this spring Cathedral Gardens had become a new shrine.

Today, as on every other day, Kay Forrest could not believe that this had recently been like the rest of Little Moccasin Swamp: dreary and menacing. The underbrush had been cleared away; the water was unblemished by drift. And here and there through the vaulted arches she could see islands, ablaze with Indian azalea. Each tiny island was a living flame of color; rich red and pink and magenta. There were no leaves to be seen; merely a welter of color splashing the gray-and-black of cypress and moss and water. In this hushed hour the place was unearthly, and to have conversed would have seemed sacrilege. So Miss Maynard did not speak until they approached an island near the edge of the Gardens, an island larger than the rest, an island rising from the water and rioting with color. Then Miss Maynard said, "We'll stop here."

The bateau nosed into the bank, and Miss Maynard stepped out, carrying her photographic equipment. The older woman was quietly efficient. She critically surveyed the spot she had chosen, scrutinized the light sifting through the gray moss; expertly appraising camera angles and backgrounds; observing the rich magnificence of azalea bushes, and noting with approval a great live oak rising majestically from the middle of the island. She said, "This will do, Kay. Come along."

Kay Forrest helped. She offered no comment, but watched Miss Maynard as the camera was set up at a proper vantage spot. And while Miss Maynard was experimenting with camera and tripod and lens, Kay Forrest walked to the water's edge and stared into the infinite beauty.

She didn't hear Miss Maynard approach, and she was startled by the touch of Miss Maynard's hand on her shoulder.

Miss Maynard said, "It gets you, doesn't it, Kay?"

The girl smiled. "Always."

"You're a peculiar little thing . . ."

"Because I love this?"

"Perhaps. You were raised in Beauregard County. You've known these swamps all your life."

"But not as they are now. Oh! I reckon it seems crazy, but I've always wondered why somebody else didn't understand how lovely the swamp could be."

"And now someone has." Miss Maynard's eyes twinkled. "I don't suppose Barney Hamilton has anything to do with this joy of yours, has he?"

Kay's eyes crinkled at the corners. "Barney's pretty swell. I like being teased about him."

"You should. He's rather gone off the deep end about you."

"Really?"

"What do you think?"

"I'm scared to say." Kay touched the hand of the older woman. "Whatever it is, Miss Maynard, I can't help being happy. I suppose . . . well, I suppose I've just discovered what fun it is to be alive. And I enjoy posing for you, too."

"I see." Dryly. "You merely responded to the summons of Art. You left your home in Beverly to uplift the rotogravure sections of newspapers." Miss Maynard's eyes had a gentle, faraway look. "Listen, Child, keep what you've got. Make the most of it. Of this natural beauty, of your youth, of Barney . . . There I go, talking like a silly, sentimental old maid . . ."

Miss Maynard turned away. Her voice was impersonal again, professional. "I'm going to take two or three shots by that live oak yonder. Better get your clothes off."

Easily, naturally—without embarrassment or false modesty—the girl removed dress and slip and shoes and stockings. She stood forth in the dawn, firm and young and beautiful; her youthful figure touched by the first rays of the sun. She said, "You're sure my face will never show in these pictures, Miss Maynard?"

"Don't be absurd. I'm using you as part of the background. Silhouettes."

She walked with the girl to the ancient oak. She posed Kay and

"Don't you git up we ain't goin' to see nothin'."

draped her with chiffon. She said, "I'd like to be young again, Kay—and have your figure."

She peered through the lens of her camera and said, "Perfect. I'll get two or three good shots here. Then we'll try some near that big azalea bush. Over yonder by the black gum." Suddenly, she smiled: "You're an interesting person, Kay Forrest. You're as free and natural . . ."

And the young girl answered, "I don't feel embarrassed, Miss Maynard. Out here—this way . . ." She groped for words. "It sort of seems the right thing."

"It is," said Miss Maynard. And then, almost curtly, "Take your pose now. That's right. Hold it . . ."

Mr. Jefferson Butler was sleeping, his bony, elongated figure covered informally by a patchwork quilt which made no pretensions to cleanliness.

Jeff's bed had been a thing of beauty in the days of its youth—or so Jeff considered. It had been white then: white enamel, and there were curlicues of iron at the head and foot, and four brass balls marking the corners. Three of these brass decorations had long since disappeared, and the white enamel had been chipped so that the iron bedstead now was a mass of ugly black scabs.

Jeff grumbled, grunted, tossed—and finally opened weak gray eyes upon a world of gray. Framed in the window was the mustachioed countenance of Mr. Clem Ross, a man diminutive of stature and of intelligence. Beyond Clem's face was a brief vista of Big Moccasin Swamp: a miasmatic blanket hovering over it, chilling the air and rendering Jeff's patchwork quilt more than usually seductive. Clem spoke again, his beady eyes eager, "It's 'most daylight, Jeff. Don't you git up we ain't goin' to see nothin'."

Remembrance came to Mr. Butler and he eased his long figure out of the bed.

Jeff's home in Big Moccasin Swamp was considerably more than ever so humble. It contained five rooms and was weatherproof save when the weather was inclement. On the dogtrot stood a rickety table and five chairs. In the corner was a washtub which was used by a visiting colored woman on such rare occasions as Mr. Butler decided that his wardrobe needed cleansing. Two pigs snored happily near the back steps and chickens roosted on the chairs. An underfed and mournful hound dog slouched forward to greet his master, tail wagging warily.

In the dim light of early morning, Mr. Butler could see the borders of his estate. He could see the scraggly cotton patch, as yet not planted; and the brief field which would—if he happened to get around to it—produce corn during the coming summer. There was the truck patch, too, wherein Jeff was inclined to raise greens and turnips and potatoes, and beyond the truck patch, through an opening in the pines, he could see Willow Creek which was an undignified tributary to the almost-as-undignified Catfish River.

Clem Ross said again, "We sho' better hurry, Jeff," and Mr. Butler swung off in a southerly direction, his long strides compelling the smaller man to drop into a half-trot in order to keep pace, so that Clem said complainingly, "Well, there ain't that much hurry."

"You reckon Kay Forrest will be there?" he inquired anxiously.

Jeff cast a weatherwise eye skyward. "She's sho' to be."

"How come you know?"

"'Cause the sun'll be out in a few minutes. Kay an' that female pitcher-taker always go out right after sun-up. I found out about them accidental one maw'nin' when I got to work too early."

Clem's weak eyes blinked. "But Kay—she don't really take off all her clothes, does she?"

"You'll see."

"S'posin' the folks in Beverly was to know about it?"

Jeff whistled. "They'd be hell to pay, sho' nuff."

"Ain't you truthin'," endorsed Clem.

Jeff Butler could not long remain silent. He said, "Beauregard County was a quiet, God-fearin' place before Ruth Hamilton come down from New Yawk an' had them Gardens builded."

"Sho' was."

"I never figured out what got into her . . . doin' a lot of work pretty in' up a swamp."

"Money!" sneered Jeff. "She craved to make money." Then his eyes lighted with interest. "It cost her a whole slew of cash to git things goin', but she's makin' plenty now."

"Mmm-hmm! Must be the 'ee hundred tourists in Beverly." Then he added virtuously, "That's what's ruinin' the town an' sendin' our young folks straight to hell."

Jeff was in thorough agreement. He even elaborated upon the theme. He said, "I knowed Ruth Hamilton when she was knee-high to a drop of rain. Purty kid, and it never s'prised me when she married that rich feller from New Yawk."

"He died, didn't he?"

"Sho' did. Left her with them two children. Folks tell that they was rich but the depression ruined them. So she come back to Beverly an' put her money into fixin' up them Gardens. That was all the property her ol' man left her."

Clem said, "Tch! Tch!"

"They're kind of nice," Jeff admitted grudgingly, "but folks hereabouts ain't aimin' to stand 'em for long. You know . . ." He dropped his voice confidentially: "There's some awful hell-raisin' goin' on in Beverly ev'ry night. Dancin' an' all such as that."

"It's the work of the Devil," confessed Clem. Then, somewhat anxiously, "You reckon Kay Forrest really is goin' to take off ev'ry stitch of clothes?"

Jeff said, "Ssssssh! Yonder she is . . . on that island."

They threw themselves flat and crawled under and between azalea bushes. And they peered out at the little island where Miss Maynard was posing Kay and rearranging her chiffon drapes.

Clem inhaled sharply. "She sho' is purty."

PAUL WRITES PERSONAL LETTERS

LESSON TEXT—II Timothy 1:1-6; Phil. mon 1:7, 21, 22.
GOLDEN TEXT—Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth.—II Timothy 2:15.

Letters—what interest we all take in them! We go to town to get the mail, or we stop our work at the familiar signal of the postman. Too little thought is given to the possibility that our letters may be a means of blessing in God's hand. Paul has given us model Christian epistles.

In considering our lesson it is difficult to indicate specific verses, but the reader can readily identify the truth taken from the lesson under each division.

I. Remembrance.

Paul did not write letters which were impersonal and distant in spirit. The warmth of a loving heart, the refreshing recollection of past fellowship, a genuine interest in the joys and sorrows of his brethren put love into every sentence of his letters.

We need to learn the art of writing letters. Even so-called business communications may often carry a touch of encouragement or inspiration. Personal letters should certainly be a constant medium of keeping bright the flame of affection between parents and children, brothers and sisters, and Christian friends separated by distance.

Observe that the remembrance of Paul had to do with both personal and spiritual matters, and note how naturally and easily the two blend. There should be no need of being offensively "preachy" in writing letters. The personal and spiritual interests of our lives should be so close together that we normally and without effort can put them forth as one in spirit.

II. Inspiration.

Who has not had the unforgettable experience of receiving a letter just when his cheering word was needed. Many a man has been saved from despair and possible destruction by such "a word fitly spoken" which is "like apples of gold in pictures of silver" (Prov. 25:11). "A word spoken in due season, how good is it!" (Prov. 15:23).

We enjoy receiving such letters—do we make an effort to write them to others? Or do we excuse ourselves by saying, "You know I am such a poor letter-writer!" when the fact is that we are probably lazy or indifferent to the needs of our friends?

Notice that Paul's inspiration and instruction to his friends revolved around two points—his constant prayers on their behalf and his faithful presentation of the teaching of God's Word. If we would follow his example we must first really pray and then study God's Word for ourselves before we shall be ready to pass it on to others.

III. Admonition.

Scolding has no place in a letter, but kindly admonition is quite in order. Paul improved every opportunity to urge his readers to personal piety, Christian fellowship, attendance upon the means of grace, prayer, and the study of God's Word. He also urged his young brother in the Lord's service to "stir up the gift of God" which was in him. The influence of the world, the pressure of work, or some burden of spirit might cause a man to bog down in the slough of despond or of mediocrity. A letter from a true Christian friend at such a time might well be the means in God's hand of renewing holy resolves and of stimulating renewed endeavor. Do you think of someone who is waiting for that kind of a letter from you?

IV. Co-operation.

Friendship and fellowship are not one-sided. The very words demand the existence and interaction of two personal beings. "A man that hath friends must show himself friendly" (Prov. 18:24). Paul recognized this, and when he wrote to Philemon he gave him opportunity to respond in loving obedience to a request while at the same time he showed the highest degree of Christian consideration and courtesy toward Philemon. The epistle is a "masterpiece of persuasive tact and delicacy and an enduring model of truest Christian courtesy" (Ellicott).

No right thinking person is satisfied to be the constant recipient of the love and thoughtfulness of another with no opportunity to reciprocate. The smallest child or the humblest individual who must receive help wants to show his loving appreciation. A considerate friend will therefore open such an opportunity, not as a command or in a spirit of expecting something in return, but as an act of Christian courtesy.

Habit of Immortal

To think of today's work as a part of the infinite work is an immortal's habit.—Edward Everett Hale.

Today's popularity of Doan's Pills, after many years of worldwide use, surely must be accepted as evidence of satisfactory use. And favorable public opinion supports that of the able physicians who test the value of Doan's under exacting laboratory conditions.

These physicians, too, approve every word of advertising you read, the objective of which is only to recommend Doan's Pills as a good diuretic treatment for functional kidney disorder and for relief of the pain and worry it causes.

If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove waste that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole body suffers when kidneys lag, and diuretic medication would be more often employed.

Burning, scanty or too frequent urination may be warning of disturbed kidney function. You may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up at night, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel weak, nervous, all played out.

Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won world-wide acclaim than on something less favorably known. Ask your neighbor!

CHILD of EVIL

by

OCTAVUS ROY COHEN

Octavus Roy Cohen, author of this unusual serial, has written several novels of contemporary Southern life, notable among which are "Scarlet Woman," "Transient Lady," and "With Benefit of Clergy."

Best of all, in the opinion of outstanding critics, is "Child of Evil," an intensely human document of the warm Southland. Romance, mystery, suspense, action—all make up the exciting serial that is "Child of Evil."

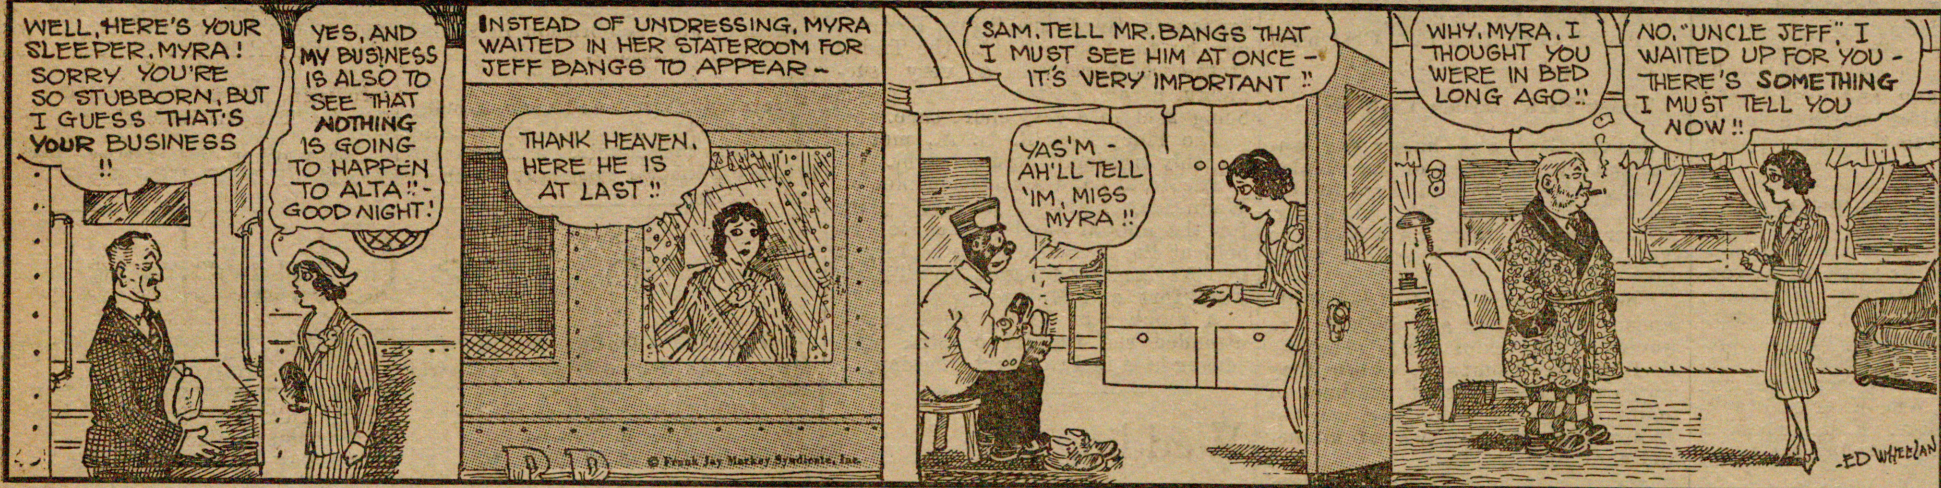

Known throughout the nation for his stories in leading periodicals, including Red Book, Collier's, Cosmopolitan and Saturday Evening Post, Octavus Roy Cohen is one of America's best known and most popular writers. His "Child of Evil" demonstrates why that popularity is so well deserved.

Charming Patterns For Smart Fashions

IF YOU want to look slimmer than you are, and do it in the coolest, smartest way possible, make yourself a dress like 1756. The skirt, paneled front and back, and cut to a high, fitted waistline, is beautifully slenderizing. The bodice is adroitly gathered to take care of bust fullness. Cape sleeves flutter charmingly from a smooth shoulder-line, and the deep V-neckline is your favorite. Make this of chiffon, georgette, linen or voile. You'll be delighted with its softness, coolness and chic.

Three-Piece Sports Ensemble.
No. 1755 takes care of three things you'll certainly want to take on your vacation—and that's a lot to get out of one pattern. You can make with it a sleeveless play suit, a separate skirt that transforms it into a daytime dress, and a bolero that makes the dress into a little suit! Just think what a blessing that will be, when you come to pack! And all three parts are just as smart and becoming as they can be! Gingham, percale, linen and pique are practical fabrics for this.

The Patterns.
No. 1756 is designed for sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50 and 52. Size 38 requires 4 1/4 yards of 39-inch material without nap.
No. 1755 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Size 14 requires 5 1/2 yards of 35-inch material; 10 yards of braid or bias fold.

Spring and Summer Pattern Book.
Send 15 cents for the Barbara Bell Spring and Summer Pattern Book, which is now ready. Make yourself attractive, practical and becoming clothes, selecting designs from the Barbara Bell well-planned, easy-to-make patterns.

Send your order to The Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., Room 1324, 211 W. Wacker Dr., Chicago, Ill. Price of patterns, 15 cents (in coins) each.

How Women in Their 40's Can Attract Men

Here's good advice for a woman during her change (usually from 38 to 52), who fears she'll lose her appeal to men, who worries about hot flashes, loss of pep, dizzy spells, upset nerves and moody spells.

Get more fresh air, 8 hrs. sleep and if you need a good general system tonic take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made especially for women. It helps Nature build up physical resistance, thus helps give more vivacity to enjoy life and assist calming jittery nerves and disturbing symptoms that often accompany change of life. WELL WORTH TRYING!

BRIDAL SHOWER

On Tuesday evening, June 6, a shower was given by Mrs. Henry Kampe at her home in honor of Miss Lucille Bode. Bunco was the chief amusement of the evening, with the prizes going to Miss Laura Wille, Miss Irene Hoger, Mrs. Emil Harms and Miss Clara Harms who in return presented them to the bride to be. The rooms were decorated in the prospective bride's colors, white, pink, blue and yellow as was the chair in which she was seated while opening the many and useful gifts she received. After which a luncheon was served to the thirty guests present.

BODE-KLIER NUPTIALS

St. Paul's Lutheran church in Sedan Prairie was the scene of a beautiful wedding Saturday afternoon, June 10, at 3 o'clock, when Miss Lucille Bode, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lorenz Bode of Matteson, became the bride of Wilbert Klier, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Klier of Frankfort, with the Rev. F. L. Treskow officiating. The double ring ceremony was used.

The bride was gown in beautiful white mouseline de soi and wore a fingertip veil. She carried a bridal bouquet of white roses and sweet peas. She entered on the arm of her father to the strains of Lohengrin's Wedding march played by Mrs. Irene Urbach. The bride was attended by one of her twin sisters, Sylvia, as maid of honor who wore pink chiffon and carried a bouquet of pink roses and pink sweet peas. The bridesmaids were Miss Sema Bode twin sister who wore pale blue chiffon and carried pink roses and pink sweet peas, and Miss Adeline Klier, sister of the groom who wore yellow chiffon and carried pink roses and pink sweet peas. The groom was attended by his brother, Robert, as best man. The ushers were Erwin Marquardt and Clarence Becker.

Later a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents with about forty-five relatives and friends present.

Those present were: Rev. F. J. Treskow, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Urbach and son, Mr. and Mrs. William Klier and family, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Shroth, Mrs. Orlando Buchmeier, Mr. and Mrs. George Bode, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Marquardt, Sr. and Mrs. William Kampe and family, Mr. and Mrs. Archie Meyer, Mr. George Marquardt and family, Wilbert Wille, Clarence Becker, and Miss Florence Stuenkel.

American Legion Auxiliary Activity
Business meeting of Tinley Park American Legion Auxiliary, Unit #15 was held Friday, June 9, 1939 in the home of Mrs. Trudie Swisher, 173rd place.

In remembrance of Flag Day our Americanism chairman, Erna Wallin brought us the "History of Our Flag." Sunday, June 4, was Pilgrimage Day at Normal, Ill., the Soldier and Sailor Orphans Home, and our Unit was represented by the Carr family, Rowdens and Brandaus. The Eighth District served a lunch to the orphan boys of Sherman Cottage and also presented them with a radio, picnic trays and camp chairs. Francis Rowden and Mamie Brandau served on this committee for the district. The children were very much excited and happy over the gifts and they in turn presented a musical program for the visitors at the cottage.

Tuesday afternoon at 2 p. m. June 13, the Service Class met at Trudie Swisher's home and sewed on carpet rags.

Juniors of Auxiliary will meet at Helen Carr's home Saturday, June 17, at 2 p. m. Their advisor, Myrtle Wolf, sent several pounds of tin foil to the Veterans Craft Shop, Chicago, for the Juniors.

A Fidac program will be had next meeting which has been postponed to July 30 instead of the Fourth Friday as usual, because of Carnival Week, June 23, 24, and 25. Mrs. Dena Hansen is chairman of Auxiliary refreshment booth to be had at the Legion Carnival.

The next Eighth District meeting will be held at Madison, Ill., with Homewood assisting.

Next Council meeting will be on Friday, July 7, at the Hotel LaSalle in the Red Room. All delegates and chairmen should attend these two meetings.

The election of new officers was had at this June business meeting with the following elected: Francis Ceithaml, president; Erna Wallin, 1st vice president; Myrtle Wolf, second vice president; Frances Rowden, Treasurer; Minnie Felten, chaplain; Evelyn La Grande, Sergeant-at-arms; Bertha Fay, historian.

After the close of meeting, Mrs. Swisher showed the members her dream home come true. The night was stormy but that did not dampen the spirits of the members on election night.

Don't forget, girls, June 30 is social night at Dena Hansen's home, 183rd street. Please come.

Blanch Carr, Unit Pub. Chairman.

Tinley Park Garden Club News

A delightful and happy day was enjoyed by members of the Tinley Park Garden Club and Mrs. Henke, guest, Friday, June 9th, when Mr. Boeyer acted as host on a visit to the Legge Memorial Estate in Hinsdale.

These spacious and beautifully landscaped grounds are dedicated to women employees of the International Harvester Company, where they may enjoy the pleasant pastimes of tennis, swimming, dancing, various games and the full use of kitchen and club rooms.

Accommodations were arranged for a hearty picnic lunch on the airy patio overlooking beautiful borders of gay flowers.

We were pleasantly surprised when Mr. and Mrs. Boeyer served the entire group ice cream.

Leaving the Estate we next journeyed to the Hinsdale nurseries. A drive through approximately seventy acres of evergreens, red maple, weeping willow, mountain ash, rose and peony gardens revealed a wealth of virgin stock. Mr. Title, proprietor, answered questions freely and many fancies became facts.

In planting trees it is advisable to use top soil only, allowing the soil removed in excavating to become sweetened by exposure to the sun. Suggestions were given on pruning to assure decorative trees.

The subject of ridding the lawn of dandelions was discussed thoroughly.

A potted winter creeper (Euromonium) was the gift to each visitor.

Driving through Hinsdale, under a majestic archway of lofty trees, the flower show celebrating the Du Page County Centennial, displayed many meritorious exhibits.

The schedule included a stage setting of Caroline Martin Mitchell Furniture dating from 1845.

A dinner table (old school) boasted of pewter and dinnerware dated 1700 and 1783, a homespun cloth from the year 1700.

Flower carts and wheel barrows vivid in harmony of color and arrangement, not to mention Early American and present day turn vases for buffet, console and mantle.

Distinction and personality were evident throughout. Congratulations to the Du Page County Centennial on a glorious and beautifully sentimental Flower and Garden Show.

And now a great big thank you to our host and hostess, Mr. and Mrs. Boeyer.

The community of Tinley Park is invited to share in spreading cheer and comfort by "Saying it with flowers." Mrs. H. Brueggeman will greatly appreciate your contributions on Tuesday evenings during the month of June for shipment to Chicago on Wednesday morning.

The shipment this week consisted of 220 bouquets, flowers being received from Mesdames Hoar, Art Schoeneck, Shirley O'Neill, Grace and Florence Uthe, Rosemarie Osterreich, J. Funk, K. Fulton Rogers, J. Klepper, Duff, Marquardt, Hartman, Loretta Uthe, Elizabeth Uthe, Boeyer, Brueggeman and O'Neill. These were greatly appreciated.

Mrs. Combs was hostess to the club Thursday, June 15th, at 1:00 p. m. Florence Anderson, Publicity Chairman.

The Association of Chicago's 1933 Century of Progress Horticultural Exposition will hold its annual spring breakfast at Plentwood farm at Bensonville, Saturday, June 17 at 12:30 o'clock. Short talks on the San Francisco Fair flower culture will be given by Mrs. R. J. Barr, Mrs. Albert Pohlman, Mrs. Fred Waterman, and the Association's president, Mrs. Wallace B. Combs.

Plentwood Farm this time of the year is beautiful with 40,000 daphniums in bloom. Members of the association from Tinley Park who are expected to attend are: Mrs. Chas. Nielsen, Mrs. Frank Baldwin and Mrs. Wm. Funk.

Mr. and Mrs. James English, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. James, Mr. and Mrs. Ervin Funk and Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Freberg left Wednesday by automobile on a trip to Canada. Wm. Funk and Wm. Koehler left Wednesday morning on a fishing trip to Havana, Ill.

Wednesday was observed as flag day in Tinley Park and the streets were decorated with the national emblem by the local post of the American Legion.

Cutting of weeds along Tinley Park streets will be undertaken within the next few days under the direction of Chief of Police, C. A. Steinhagen and the chairman of the Street Committee, Wm. Wannemacher.

The bakery sale held in the Bettenhausen Hardware Store Wednesday by the Ladies Aid of the Tinley Methodist church was a very successful affair, all the bakery goods being sold in a very short time.

The Tinley Park R. N. A., met in monthly session Tuesday night.

The local band association met on Wednesday night to perfect plans for the annual band picnic to be held at the Frankfort Grove July 2 by the combined bands of Tinley, Frankfort and Mokena.

A number of Tinley Park people attended the funeral of Mrs. Ben Mager held in Frankfort Tuesday.

Wedding At Riverview Park This Sunday

There's going to be a June wedding at Riverview—on the park's Pair O-Chutes Ride!

The time has been set for 4 p. m. Sunday, June 18.

The guest list is one of the longest in the history of weddings, being based on the census report rather than the smaller telephone directory. In fact, anyone who buys a regular gate admission on that day can go to the wedding. Even better than that, everyone who visits the park before Sunday, June 18, will get a wedding invitation as he leaves the park and the invitation will admit him to the gate without charge the day of the wedding.

Preceding the wedding there will be a wedding march down the park midway, with a dozen flower girls heading the procession. The wedding march will end at the Pair-O-Chutes ride. Bride and groom will ascend in one of the chutes to near the top of the 225' foot tower. The preacher will ascend in another. When the chutes stop, the ceremony will begin with the aid of an inter-communication system between the two chutes.

To avoid any possibility of privacy the communication system will also be hooked up to the park's loud speakers located all over the grounds.

Since each chute will hold only two persons and having people sitting on each other's laps would detract from the dignity of the occasion, the best man and matron of honor will have to give what aid and comfort they can from a separate chute. The groom probably will carry the ring himself. Having the best man toss it at the appropriate time from another chute seems somewhat impractical.

As the final "I do" is said, the 3 chutes will be released and the wedding party will zoom back to earth, symbolic in this instance of married life. Then the couple will leave on their honeymoon amid the cheers and well wishes of intimate friends and a few thousand other people.

The bride will be pretty brunette Alma Hauer, 21, 8316 Yates Ave. The groom will be Harry Tomlinson, 28, West 105th St. Mr. and Mrs. Harry Johnson, 702 West 103rd St., will be best man and matron of honor. Judge Ralph Fjellman of Niles Center will perform the ceremony, which will be as legal and binding as those conducted under more traditional circumstances.

For a Safe and Sane Fourth

Members of the Cook County Council, American Legion Auxiliary, from all parts of Chicago and Cook County are directing a safe and sane Fourth of July campaign.

Instead of denying the urge of children and adults to witness a brilliant display of fireworks and a patriotic celebration, the auxiliary members are urging attendance at the American Legion's fifth annual Fourth of July celebration in Soldier Field on Tuesday, Independence Day.

Here spectators will view a brilliant fireworks display, outstanding circus and stage acts, and an impressive patriotic pageant with a cast of more than one thousand.

Mrs. Helene Omlie, auxiliary president has placed the direction of the campaign in the hands of Miss Agnes Eckman, child welfare chairman. With the active assistance of hundreds of women members of the auxiliary, Miss Eckman is well started on her work.

The Fourth of July celebration will open at 7 p. m. with a series of clown acts, featuring the famous clown KO-KO and several American Legion "leaping lenas." Next will come the circus acts, including thrilling performances atop a 100' foot pole, the "Cannon Girl" act, in which a young girl is shot 60 feet from a cannon to be caught in mid-air by two men, and an adagio dance number by "The Aristocrats."

Many other interesting features are also scheduled for the program.

FATHER'S DAY

Speaking of Dads, Here's a Choice Group; Their Children Helped Make Them Famous

"I don't care much for Bankhead but I'd like to meet Tallulah." So ran the song from "I'd Rather Be Right." William Bankhead is speaker of the House. Daughter Tallulah is a famous stage actress.

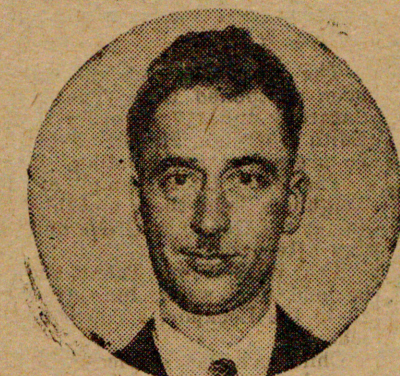

Joseph P. Kennedy, U.S. ambassador to Britain, millionaire, former SEC chairman and maritime commission chairman, is quite a family man besides. He'll get nine presents this Father's Day.

SUNDAY, June 18, brings local observance of the twenty-ninth annual Father's Day, a custom originated at Spokane, Wash., in 1910 by Mrs. John Bruce Dodd, now director of a funeral home. She started it in tribute to her father, a G.A.R. veteran named William J. Smart. Most fathers aren't illustrious, but they're Dad to someone and nothing else counts. Some fathers are famous in their own right. Others, strangely, grow in stature partly through notoriety achieved through their children. Here are five samples:

Eighty-five-year-old Henry Morgenthau was famous years ago as ambassador to Turkey and an international peace worker. Son Henry, now secretary of the treasury, keeps Henry Sr.'s name in the limelight.

Father Oliva Dionne was just another man with a large family until the quints came along. Five of a kind would keep most men busy. But don't forget that Papa Dionne has seven other young mouths to feed!

ing party. The hours were spent in formally, and Miss Latz received many lovely gifts, which were presented to her in a beautifully decorated basket. A luncheon was served at individual tables. Both the table and house were decorated in Blue and White, the chosen colors of Miss Latz.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Hoover have returned to their home in Altoona, Pa., after having visited here several days with Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Ellis. Miss Dorothy Lunsford of Miami, Fla. who has been visiting here with Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Ellis and Mr. and Mrs. Carlton Coles, has left for New York where she will visit the Worlds Fair.

Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Anderson, Mrs. A. W. Walsh and Miss Beatrice Walsh motored to Mokena, Ill. Sunday afternoon where they viewed the wreckage of the cyclone, that damaged so much territory in the South-eastern part of Illinois and parts of Indiana last Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Archie Corp and daughter Ardis and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Gough have returned home from New York where they spent 10 days at the World's Fair. They also stopped in Kentucky and Washington.

Lloyd Pfaff has arrived here from St. Louis where he stopped on business, enroute here from his home in Mobile, Ala. He arrived to join his family who have been visiting their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Pfaff and Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Hunt, and other relatives and friends before returning to their home in Mobile, next week. Mrs. Pfaff and children have been here seven weeks.

A special Band meeting was held Monday night in the school, to finish plans for the 4th of July picnic.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Meyers of Lyle, Ill., visited with friends Sunday, here.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Francis and son Milton, of Orland Park, and Mr. and Mrs. Ab. Kercheval were Sunday guests at the Wilbur Rapsons.

Mr. and Mrs. Homer J. Smith of Tulsa, Oklahoma are visiting here with Mr. and Mrs. Walter Rhinhardt.

Approximately 40 relatives and friends gathered at the Housewarming Party Saturday night, in the new home of the Carlton Coles, in Brookwood subdivision. Dancing and singing were the evening's diversion.

A buffet supper was served at mid-night. Guests were: Miss Dorothy Lunsford, Miami, Fla., Fred Allen, Los Angeles, Cal. Mr. and Mrs. Homer J. Smith, Tulsa, Okla., Mrs. Lloyd Pfaff, Mobile, Alabama, Edwin Underhill, Elgin, Mr. and Mrs. Edw. Berndt, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Papenhausen and Mr. and Mrs. Howard Johnson of Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Way, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Decker, Miss Madeline and Robt. King, all of Wheaton; Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Hoover, of Altoona, Pa. Mr. and Mrs. Walter Rhinhardt, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Ellis, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Hunt, Mr. and Mrs. Ellis O'Daniel, Mrs. Warren McIntyre, Mrs. Marion Quinn, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Senning, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Hobson and Mr. and Mrs. Earl Roth, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Penn, Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Bellmar, Mr. and Mrs. Curley Vacher, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Baer, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Ekedahl, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Fuerer all of New Lenox.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Lewis McLaughlin announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter Angela Catherine, to Howard S. O'Connor, Jr. son of Mr. and Mrs. H. S. O'Connor of Aurora. The wedding will take place in St. Joseph's church of Manhattan, June 24.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Oram Jr., are the proud parents of a daughter born May 31st.

On Saturday, June 10 at a nuptial high mass, through which the Blessed Sacrament was exposed, in St. John's Catholic church, Miss Elizabeth Latz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert J. Latz, became the bride of Lawrence Surges, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Surges, with the Rev. Father Constantine Bach, O.F.M. of ficiating. The bride was lovely in a long gown of blue silk marquisette. She wore a shoulder length veil of blue net, caught by a tiara of roses, pink peonies, and blue delphinium. For something borrowed, the bride wore a gold locket, borrowed from a very good friend, Miss Shirley Bolan. Her bouquet was of white carnations lily of the valley and forget-me-nots.

Mrs. Surges was attended by her sister, Mrs. Edward Berens who was dressed in a floor length gown of pink marquisette with a shoulder length veil of blue net, caught with baby pink rosebuds. She carried a Colonial bouquet of pink peonies and blue delphinium. The groom was attended by his brother, Raymond Surges. Mrs. Albert J. Latz, mother of the groom, wore a dress of navy Orchid lace with white accessories, while Mrs. Joseph Surges, mother of the groom, wore a dress of Navy Marquisette with white accessories. Both wore corsages of mixed seasonal flowers.

A wedding breakfast was served at the Seivert tea room to members of the immediate families, following the ceremony. The couple left on a short wedding trip and upon their return will live with the brides parents.

Richard Kohlhaugen of Rockford is visiting here with his grandparents Mr. and Mrs. Peter Sinclair. The Kitzrow-Schmuhl families will hold their annual family reunion on Sunday, June 18 at Highland Park.

Mrs. Joseph Novak and daughter are visiting with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Will Sayers and family.

Chas. West is a medical patient in Mercy hospital at Chicago.

Members of the Frankfort-New Lenox 4-H club met at their regular meeting Tuesday night in the Summit hill school.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Salisbury, South Cedar road, are the proud parents of a daughter born in Silver Cross hospital, June 7.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Goodall of Chicago spent Tuesday with Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Walsh.

Following the Children's Day exercises Sunday in the M. E. church, 6 children were baptized: Ethel Mae, and James Andrew Hobbs, children of Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Hobbs; Wm. Edward and Mary Ann Bradley, children of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Bradley; Lester Harry Gullickson son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Gullickson; and Barbara Ione Sayers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Willard Sayers.

The cooking unit of the Sunny Circle 4-H club met on Saturday June 10 in the home of Mrs. Edward Allen. Dorothy Walker gave an instructive demonstration of cake mixing. On Wednesday, June 14, the home improvement unit will meet in the home of Mrs. O. V. Rowe. On Friday June 16, the clothing unit will meet at the home of Mrs. Steven Sargeant, and the Foods unit with Mrs. Harold Gilkinson.

The Home-Making group of the New Lenox P.T.A. enjoyed a picnic and lawn party on Thursday, June 15 at the home of Mrs. O. V. Rowe. A picnic dinner was served at noon. Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Cerven of Chicago spent Friday here with Mr. and Mrs. Jack Minicis.

Mrs. Mary Bentley and Miss Caroline Bentley were hostesses to the B-Square club in their home Wednesday afternoon. Prizes for airplane bunco were awarded Mrs. Jack Embling, Mrs. John Warning and Miss Dolly Kersten, a guest of the club. The traveling prize went to Mrs. Henry Yahn. The club will meet in two weeks with Mrs. E. Kersten.

Mrs. Mary Bentley and Miss Caroline Bentley were hostesses to the B-Square Club in their home Wednesday afternoon. Prizes for airplane bunco were awarded Mrs. Jack Embling, Mrs. John Warning and Miss Dolly Kersten, a guest of the club. The traveling prize went to Mrs. Henry Yahn. The club will meet in two weeks with Mrs. E. Kersten.

The Ladies Aid Society of the M. E. Church met last Wednesday in the church parlors. Following the business meeting, plans were made for a fall bazaar which will be held October 17. Officers were elected as follows: Mrs. Edw. Sievert, president; Dr. Jeanette Holt, vice president; Mrs. Henry Miller, secretary and Mrs. J. E. Francis, treasurer. Refreshments were served by Mrs. Wm. Gullickson and her committee.

Mrs. Melda Rhinhardt entertained at the June meeting of the Women's Guild Thursday afternoon. Mrs. Geo. Morris, presided at the business meeting. Mrs. Geo. Hunt assisted the hostess.

Mrs. Robt. Stockley who has been ill in her home is improving.

Harold Crate, a student of the University of Illinois, has returned home for the summer.

The New Lenox A. C. Kittenball team which was scheduled to play their first game of the season here, Thursday night June 15, has had to postpone the game until Sunday night June 18, because of the rainy weather, holding them back in getting the diamond ready.

Mr. and Mrs. I. E. Drake of Williamsburg, Iowa, are guests of their brother, Wm. Drake and wife.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Kohler of Chicago Heights and Mr. and Mrs. Jack Minicis spent Sunday at the Brookfield Zoo.

Miss Mary Houbolt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Houbolt of North Park Road, Joliet, became the bride of Arthur F. Klotz, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Klotz of Manhattan last Wednesday evening June 7th, at 8 o'clock in the parsonage of the Evangelical church in Plainfield. The Rev. Carl J. Bauerle performed the impressive single ring ceremony. The bride was attired in a dress of powder blue crepe and wore white accessories. Her corsage was of Johanna Hill roses, sweetpeas and baby-breath. Mrs. Klotz attended the Joliet Junior college and has been teaching for the past three years. Mr. and Mrs. Klotz have returned from a short wedding trip thru the south and are now at home to their friends in Manhattan.

The Houbolt family are former New Lenox residents and this item will be of interest to their many friends.

News From Springfield

By Bernice T. Van der Vries
Representative, Seventh Senatorial District General Assembly of Illinois

ON HOME STRETCH

When the motion was made and passed in the House Thursday, that all House bills in committee be tabled there, was brought home, to all of the members the realization that the 61st session of the General Assembly was on its final stretch of work. All afternoon committees had been passing out bills in order to have them reported in to the Clerk of the House before the tabling order went into effect. Except for bills of general importance there is little hope for passage of any bills not on third reading and during the coming week probably all bills on first and second readings will be tabled.

ON THE TABLE

Probably the most widely discussed bill in the group which was tabled on Thursday was House Bill No. 581 better known as the Wages and Hours Bill. It was in a sub-committee which had not taken action. The Pharmacy Bill H. B. No. 752 was also in committee, as was the Teachers' Residence Bill so feared by Chicago Teachers residing in the suburbs of Chicago. For two successive weeks I had raised the question of a quorum in the Municipalities committee on 761.

Th Public Service Building Bill No. 759 just got in under the wire by being reported out of the sub-committee of which Representative Sprague was chairman in time to have committee action and to be advanced to first reading.

CONTROVERSIAL BILLS

Many controversial bills are on the calendar awaiting action. There were 160 bills at passage stage on Thursday. During five hours of work only seventeen bills were passed on that day. It can readily be seen that many bills will not even be called on in addition there are the Senate Bills which must have consideration.

The sole power of life and death over bills is vested in the Speaker of the House and the President of the Senate. Lines of members are constantly at the desks of these officers pleading to have their bills considered. It would seem that there should be a larger group which would represent various view points which would make the decision as to the legislation which should pass or else every bill should be called in the order of its appearance on the calendar.

Among the major bills, so far as their effects upon the people of the state, awaiting roll calls are the Ward-Schnackenberg Parole bills which were voted upon two weeks ago but which lacked the necessary number of votes and upon which consideration was postponed, and the milk control bills which were placed on passage stage last Wednesday after an effort was made to strike the enacting clause. On one side of the battle will be the milk producers and on the other side the distributors and the consumers. Many members voted against striking the enacting clause who will not vote for the bill on third reading.

HIDDEN DYNAMITE?

The truck regulation bills Nos. 151-156, inclusive, are bills also very controversial in character. Some groups which were opposed to the bills when introduced have been satisfied by amendments but other groups are violently opposed as the bills reach roll call stage. Many of the members feel that the bills carry hidden dynamite and call for caution.

There has been no action on bills repealing the minimum wage laws for policeman and firemen nor has there been any action on bills to make possible the payment of the back salaries or even the payment of future salaries.

Of comfort to the municipalities owning water and light utilities is the news that House Bill 690 which would have placed the local utilities under the jurisdiction of the Commerce Commission is not to be pushed to passage stage by the sponsor.

SCHOOL LEGISLATION

School legislation is still in the fire. The teachers pension bills are on third reading in the House. The State Aid Bill H. B. 599 so desired by the schools and which provides for the financing of the pension bills is in the Senate. Conferences were held last week by school groups and the lieutenant governor in an effort to work out some compromise. On Tuesday the House passed and sent to the Senate the bills amending the school budget law, the bills being the result of compromise between the group wishing the law repealed in its entirety and the group believing that the law should be maintained and amended.

Taxpayers' organizations and individuals interested in holding down taxes will need to be particularly alert as the session draws to a close. In the last rush many bills slip thru under the pressure of groups better represented thru lobbies than the taxpayers.

MARLEY

By Mrs. Ward Bush

Plans are in full swing for the annual Fourth of July celebration, sponsored by the Brotherhood of the Community church. There will be a pageant in the morning and in the afternoon, a short program and games and sports will be the order of the day.

At the Class Day exercises of Commencement Week, on June 7th, at the Joliet high school, Evelyn Cutler was among those to receive high honors. She won for the second time the Robert Adam award for superior scholarship. A number from here attended the graduation exercises at the high school on Thursday night.

Among the graduates were Vernia McClintock, Fay Carr and Clara Bush from this vicinity.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Rapson and daughter were guests in the A. R. Kercheval home last Sunday.

Mrs. Oscar Kase and Mrs. Wm. Goodear were Sunday visitors in the Wright Woods home.

Mr. and Mrs. Edw. Tatrow from Plainfield Road spent Sunday with the Alfred Sproat family.

Mr. and Mrs. Homer Bush of Peru, Ill., spent Sunday with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Bush.

Somebody, thinking our little, calm and peaceful, berg, needed a little excitement, staged some on Saturday night. A stolen car was left on the Wabash railroad tracks and after the one a. m. flyer had passed thru town, one couldn't tell just what the pile of junk that resulted, really had been. The car was owned by Mr. Mattei of Joliet. Here's hoping that the guilty parties will eventually be apprehended.

Jean Frazier spent last week with her sister, Mrs. Harry Hull in Chicago Heights.

The Sunday Evening Club meeting last Sunday evening was led by Daniel Sass the new president. After the meeting, those present enjoyed a social hour. Questionnaires were passed out to be filled, in an effort to get ideas as to interesting material for programs for next few months.

On next Sunday, June 18th, there will be Children's Day exercises in the Church. The program will begin at 10:30 D.S.T. Miss Evelyn Cutler is in charge and she requests that all who can, will remember to bring flowers to help with the decorations.

The Marley Women's Club will meet in the home of Mrs. Everett Bell on Tuesday June 20th. A program will start at 2:00 D.S.T. Mrs. James Bell will be assisting hostess.

Mrs. Ray Farr and daughter Ione from Chicago and Mrs. John O'Brien and daughter June from Cleveland, Ohio are guests at the O. M. Farr home. Mr. and Mrs. Rich. Farr and family were Sunday guests there also and Anna Mae is spending the week in Marley.

Mr. and Mrs. James Bell visited recently with Frank Bell and family in Joliet.

HOMER

Mrs. Fred Kopleman

Rev. C. E. Wolstead had charge of the services at the Homer church Sunday evening. The Junior choir sang, "I'll be a Sunbeam" and the Senior choir sang "Fair Lord Jesus". Sunday was set aside as Loyalty day and pledges for the ensuing year were signed.

Lockport high school had young people from Homer among its graduates. June Morris, Violet and Lillian Reed, Elvise Loucks and Elwyn Cagwin. Miss Jean Rowley graduated from the Joliet Junior college and is planning to teach school next fall. Arlene Bramman and Eleanor Purdy are graduating from the Joliet high school.

Eleanor Kopleman and other members of the Glee Club of the Lockport grade school attended the Rialto theatre in Joliet Friday afternoon. They were accompanied by Miss Manning and Miss Gleason.

Miss Shirley Jungles sang on the amateur hour Sunday afternoon over station WENR.

The Girls 4-H club meeting has been postponed from Tuesday until Saturday June 17 in order that Mrs. Edith Hoffman, Homer advisor, can be present at the meeting.

The Good Luck camp of Royal Neighbors held their monthly meeting at the Goodings Grove hall Thursday afternoon.

The WLS Home Talent show will be held next week, June 21, 22 and 23 in the Lockport Township high school.

Children's Day services will be observed next Sunday morning at 10:30 in the Homer church. Mrs. Anderson's Sunday school class will have charge of the program and Mesdames Rowley and J. White's classes will have charge of the decorations.

Edw. Ott accompanied his uncle, Elmer Rowley on a three day tour of Urbana.

Following the graduation exercises at the Lockport high school on Thursday night, about fifty young people of the Fellowship group and some friends gathered in the home of Elwyn Cagwin and helped the Homer graduates to celebrate. Games and music were enjoyed after which refreshments were served.

The Young People's Association meeting will be held at Yorkville next Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. Several of our young people are planning to attend.

Mrs. Marie Ott and daughter Elaine, Earl and Eleanor Kopleman attended the picnic of Lockport's 7th grade at Phillip's Park near Aurora, Thursday.

Geo. Konow, who has been receiving treatment at the Research hospital in Chicago for several weeks returned to his home here Tuesday and appears to be much improved.

Mrs. Arthur Hewitt underwent a major operation in Chicago last week.

The condition of Mrs. Tillie Lewis, who underwent a major operation last week is much improved. Her sister Mrs. Guy Bump visited with her Friday.

To Make A Story Short

To make a long story short—Our visit to the State Capitol at Springfield, June 5 to 10, brought to us, from the standpoint of unbiased observation, the gratification of witnessing the practically harmonious activity of a concerted, hard working Legislative body, free from the dividing lines of partisan politics.

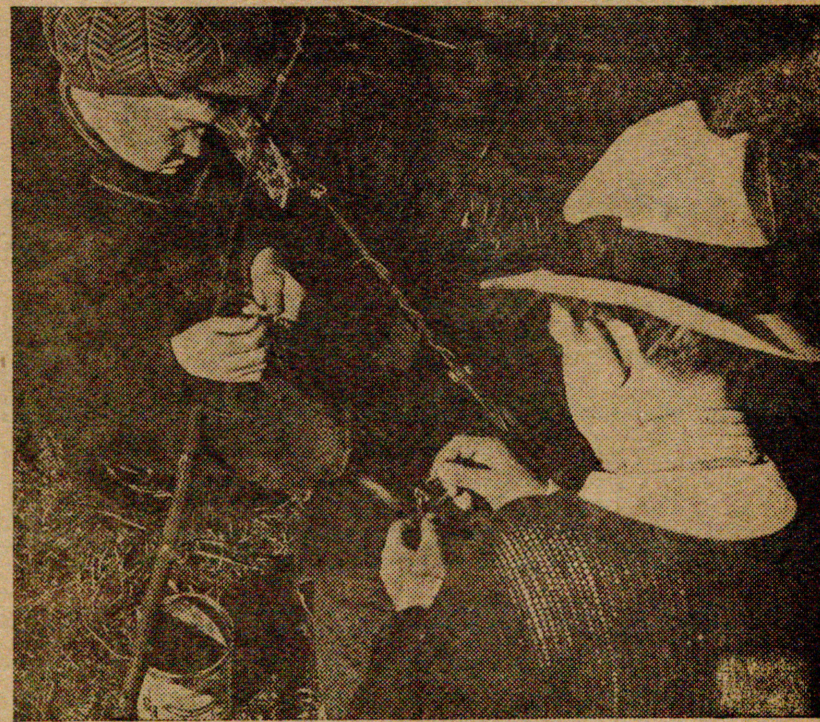

There was more heart and soul in evidence, more real, sober judgment displayed, than we have seen for years in our visits to legislative deliberations.

Were it not for the presence of a very small minority of leather-jungled larynx exercisers, playing to the back home political alarmists, the observer would be unable to determine the sectionalism in the Chambers seating arrangement. And that situation was thoroughly evidenced in both Senate and House of Representatives.

It is unfortunate for the law making body, that over-zealous and often ignorant, sub-administrators and members of departments, by reason of their lack of understanding of the principle and intent of the "Letter of the Law", in the Legislative Enactments, make it necessary to introduce so many clarifying Amendments.

"The Wage to Age", known as "Old Age Assistance", was adequate

Summer 'n' Fishin' 'n' Stuff

Angleworms . . . twisted pin . . . piece of string . . . willow branch. It all spells summer, which makes its official bow to North America on June 22.

with its $30 maximum provision, and a better law than the proposed revised edition, providing for 'not less than $30' and a maximum of $40, the sliding scale between two fixed points, is never satisfactory, but something had to be done to save the worthy Elderly Citizens from the overlord assumptions of the various investigating hord in the Old Age Assistance department of the ordinarily, capable, State Welfare Administration.

We are not looking for a 'turn over' in political alignment in 1940. Rather do we see every evidence of a selection of capable men and women, for our various elective offices, inducted into service, because of their individual appeal to the voting intelligence, regardless of political party affiliation.

Our entire 41st district membership were present and 'perspiringly' active. Senator Barr, sedate and aristocratic in appearance; Representatives Lottie Holman O'Neill, Wood and Perry, a representation we can be reasonably proud of in our Legislative body.

We regret the continued illness of Governor Horner, but we are fortunate in having had so capable and level-headed a personage as Lieutenant Governor Stelle, to 'ride herd' for the Governor, during his enforced absence.

Really, harmony is the prevailing attribute, in our Illinois State Legislature for the People's interest.

Respectfully,
COL. DON C. HALL

Christian Science Church Holds Annual Meeting

Thousands of Christian Scientists, meeting in Boston, Mass., Monday, challenged a troubled world to change its perspective from a material to a spiritual basis in its search for release from pressing economic and political problems.

The occasion for the great influx of the followers of Mary Baker Eddy was the annual meeting of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, which was filled at an early hour right up to the center balcony under the very dome of the great edifice. Thru an entire afternoon's round of addresses and reports from the field, the power of Christ, Truth, to lift individuals above the ills of human sense was acknowledged and this same spiritual power was recommended for the healing of the nations and the establishment of a permanent world peace.

Looking beneath the surface ripples of troubled international relationships apparent in the world today, The Christian Science Board of Directors saw the deep-running currents of spiritual progress "keeping alive the vital realization of spiritual truth which Christian Scientists must always nurture, whether their work be along the specific line of healing or in the important channels connected with home, church, business and government."

Church Progress Reported
Various reports cited specific instances of spiritual enlightenment at work among all nations today. In Europe, seething center of turbulent political upheavals, 21 new branch churches have been organized, 12 of them being in England.

There have been 25 new branch organizations in North America. One new one each in Africa and Australia, and 32 societies raised their status during the past year. In educational fields, 9 new university organizations became recognized units of the Christian Science movement.

"No time in the history of the Christian Science movement," said the Directors, "has the healing work been carried on with greater success or along broader lines than it is today."

The Directors said: "Surely in this period of unsteered world con-

Million Dollar High School Project To Be Dedicated Sun.

Members of the board of education of the Niles Center district and other Cook County schools are invited to join with federal, state, county and municipal officials in the dedication of the new million dollar Niles Township High School and grounds at Niles Center next Sunday (June 18). The project is one of the largest in the country devoted to educational purposes completed with government financial aid.

The high school building was erected at a cost of $857,000 with a grant of $345,000 from the Public Works Administration and the remainder coming from a bond issue by the Niles Township voters. The landscaping entailed an outlay of $243,118 of which $200,118 was furnished by the Works Progress Administration.

The school, a three story L-shaped structure divided into three units—academic, assembly and gymnasium—is modernistic in design and finished in brick and Indiana limestone. It will accommodate 1,200 students. The school is bounded by Mulford street, Niles and Lincoln avenues and Skokie road.

One of the newest features of the building is a two-story public address system from the school offices to the rooms. Teachers can be called and are able to converse directly with the office. Dismissal signals are eliminated and classes are ended with the public address system.

The building was designed by Royer, Danley and Davis, school architects of Urbana, Ill., around an educational plan conceived by T. J. Higgins, Chicago school equipment expert, the Niles board of education of which Miss Mildred Tess is president and Supt. Ralph E. Cotanche and members of the faculty. Miss Tess, by the way, is the only woman president of a board of education in the county.

The flagpole around which the ceremonies will center Sunday was the main standard bearer at the Twelfth street entrance to A Century of Progress in 1933 and 34.

The program is set for 4 p. m.

conditions our prayers are most essential and each one of us should ask himself if he is doing all that he can to meet the aggressive suggestions of error, which would try constantly to intrude, and if he is working to help spiritualize thought, thereby correcting the generally accepted material beliefs."

Geo. Shaw Cook, C. S. B., of Brookline, Mass., was elected President for the ensuing year, his chief duty being, to preside at the annual meeting.

Mr. Cook is a native of Iowa, moving to Chicago at an early age where he received his public school education. He entered the commercial world as a partner in an investment security firm. He became interested in Christian Science in 1895 in a class taught by Edw. A. Kimball, served as First Reader of Fifth Church of Christ in Chicago and numerous other positions has been held by Mr. Cook.

In handing over the meeting to the new President, Mr. Knapp traced the growth of spiritual healing from the Resurrection down to the revelation of Christian Science.

Mobile White House Hits the Trail Again; Veteran Staff Runs It Like Clockwork

President's as Near to Washington as Nearest Telephone Pole on His Cross-Country Journeys; Work Proceeds as Usual.

By JAMES HAMMOND

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

This summer a plain-looking train is pulling out of Washington bound for the west coast. Along the rails it travels, at every hamlet, crowds stand five deep to shout hail and farewell. Some places it stops and the band plays while a gentleman steps to the observation platform and waves his hat-in-hand as only Franklin Delano Roosevelt can.

The Chief's traveling again, this time from Washington to San Francisco and up to Alaska on the Houston, for a sailing Roosevelt's vacation would not be complete without ocean and salt air.

Nothing unusual about this trip, though Calvin Coolidge or Herbert Hoover might have thought so. Today's White House is mobile, so used to being packed in an overnight bag and whisked across the country, that FDR need merely press the button and away we go. His years in the harness have put to shame William Howard Taft's record for 115,000 miles; by the time President Roosevelt returns from Alaska he'll have established a White House travel total of some 160,000 miles—nor is the end in sight.

Close as a Telephone Pole.

In six years of gad-abouting the nation's nerve center has evolved such a letter perfect system of communication that efficiency has suffered not one whit; the White House on wheels is no farther from Washington than the nearest telephone pole along the railroad track, to which a line may be plugged in one minute. The President's signature and Great Seal is no farther away than the nearest airline, where transcontinental planes will swoop down at any time to pick up the presidential pouch and rush it to Washington.

Why travel? There's something to be said for critics who point out that the President can't get a very accurate picture of a nation which dresses up to meet him. Yet who can deny that the presidency carries something akin to a moral obligation; the man in the White House should go on parade for his public every now and then.

One other reason, less legitimate, is that the presidential visit may turn an election tide overnight. When in doubt, it's good politics for the Big Boss to visit a doubtful bailiwick and shake hands on the observation platform with its local party leader.

Trips Not Expensive.

Presidential junkets are not a great expense to the taxpayer, contrary to popular belief. The Chief Executive can easily stay within his $25,000-a-year travel and entertainment allowance because the railroads (whose legislation is being tabled this year to get congress out of Washington in time for the President's vacation) absorb the loss.

There are usually about 20 in the official White House party. Each of these—including the President—is assessed one first-class fair plus Pullman, and that's all except for small extra charges for special switchings. Newspaper correspondents, and political hangers-on, who ride from one end of the state to the other in hope of seeing "The Chief," must also pay regular first-class fare.

Ordinarily a private citizen would pay $75 a day for exclusive use of a car such as the President's old "Pioneer." On a 10-car train this would mean $750, and in addition the railroads usually charge a minimum of 100 fares for the special train. But the White House is exempted from such regulations, which amounts to a neat saving for John Public.

Old Stuff for the Staff.

In his private car the President is just as comfortable, yet works just as hard as if he were seated behind his desk in Washington. As described by Eugene Warner in a recent issue of Collier's magazine, the presidential junket has evolved into such a simple formula of efficiency that every member of the staff knows his post the instant a trip is announced.

E. M. Smithers, sometimes White House telegrapher and at other times chief of transportation, picks routes, arranges the train and prepares an intricate mimeographed schedule which keeps the special running not on the minute but on the second throughout its journey from coast to coast. This facilitates contact between Washington and the train, permitting the White House to ascertain exactly where the President can be reached by phone at any given moment.

"SNAP TALK"—Arriving at Los Angeles on one of his cross-country tours, President Roosevelt steps to the back platform to greet an estimated 1,000,000 awaiting him at Central station.

Up front is a baggage car where secret service men guard files, mimeograph machines, boxed typewriters and all other office paraphernalia which the President's staff may need en route. Just behind this is the club car for newspaper men, photographers, newsreel men and radio announcers, followed by compartmented Pullmans in which the visiting firemen, lobbyists, politicians and favor-seekers will ride. The diner is always supervised by Steward Joseph Tuzik, whose orders are always transmitted to Chef Richard Hardaway. They're permanent fixtures.

'Mac' Rules The Office.

Next comes the office, where Secretary Marvin McIntyre bosses a staff which usually consists of five people. First there's Henry Kannee, McIntyre's secretary, who himself has a secretary in Miss Roberta Barrows. Since the President can often keep three stenographers busy, Miss Barrows often supplements Miss Marguerite LeHand, confidential secretary to the President and a good friend of his wife.

Throughout the trip the President seldom budes from his ancient "Pioneer" parlor car, a special job containing bedrooms, offices, pantry, a dining room and an observation room fitted with comfortable furniture. It is here Mr. Roosevelt does most of his work en route, dictating, reading reports, checking up on local history or just looking at the scenery with an occasional wave of the hand at a farmer.

It's Positively Breath-Taking— But Here's the Story of pO

CHICAGO.—Northwestern university scientists have completed a series of breath-taking experiments.

If you have pO (even your best friends won't call it halitosis) the Northwestern doctors will freeze it into a solid, determine its odor intensity, let you know how often you see your dentist and even tell you which of six mouth conditions is the offender.

In short they'll take your breath away.

The work is a joint effort of Dr. Leonard S. Fosdick, head of the chemistry department of Northwestern's dental school, and Drs. Glen STEP No. 1—This pretty young patient's breath sample is frozen at 210 degrees Centigrade below zero.

E. Sulzer and Robert H. Brening, also members of the dental faculty.

"From a theoretical point of view, breath can be contaminated from three primary sources," they report. "Odors can come from mouth, lungs and nasal passages. Putrefaction processes in the mouth—like stagnant saliva, decaying teeth, pyorrhea and degenerated cells on the tongue—may be responsible."

They find, too, that digestive disturbances may contaminate the breath.

Drs. Fosdick, Sulzer and Brening found a method of segregating the mouth odors by a special apparatus which freezes them in liquid nitrogen for concentration. Then, with an "osmoscope," they can determine the odor intensity.

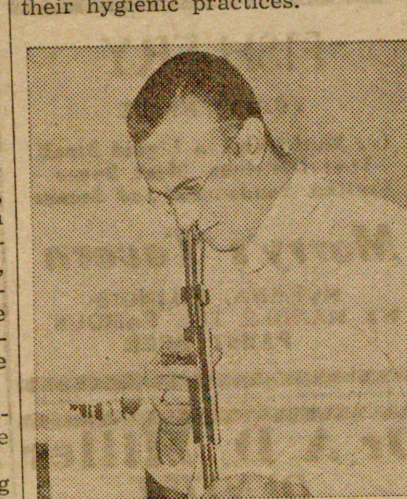

Selecting a group of patients with no putrefactive lung or nose disorders and confining their studies to odors arising in the mouth, the scientists found six factors can and do contribute to mouth unwholesomeness. They are:

Age, tooth decay, gingivitis (inflammation of the gums), pyorrhea and "time after meals." Age enters the picture because there is usually an attendant retrogression of body processes, including gum recession with a tendency toward pyorrhea. In the sex factor, it was discovered mouth unwholesomeness is greater in women than in men as individuals grow older, but women are guilty of less mouth odor intensity than men.

Dental decay, gingivitis and pyorrhea each carry an infection. Mouth odors increase in proportion to time after meals for the apparent reason that stagnation may occur in a mouth not cleansed by excursion of food.

Regular mouth hygiene, it was found, will reduce odor concentration in the mouth up to 50 per cent. In cases of gingivitis, pyorrhea and tooth decay general relief depends upon elimination of these diseases. Mouth hygiene, even though it amounts only to rinsing the mouth with water, reduces the "time after meals" factor, while persons whose pO is enhanced by on-coming age have to be more regular with their hygienic practices.

STEP No. 2—With breath frozen, Dr. Sulzer determines odor intensity with osmoscope. Forty-seven per cent of cases studied were found to have breaths in the objectionable class.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

Reviewed by CARTER FIELD

Insiders are convinced the President is working on a phase of political strategy for the next election . . . New Deal starts all over again . . . Frank Murphy looming as white hope of the New Deal . . . President expected to win his battle to continue his spending policy.

WASHINGTON.—Insiders are convinced that President Roosevelt, far from having a change of heart on the principle of taxing undistributed corporation profits at a higher rate than those paid out in dividends, is now working on a broad phase of political strategy aimed at the presidential election next year.

The proof, they say, will be revealed by comparing two speeches very carefully. The first is that delivered at the American Retail federation banquet by President Roosevelt. The second is the outline for tax revision aimed at reviving business laid before the house ways and means committee by Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau Jr.

It will be noted that Mr. Morgenthau suggested repeal of the last vestige of the special tax on undistributed corporation earnings. It is known that the President is privately strongly against this revision. It is further known that Morgenthau would not think of saying anything publicly against his chief's will.

The answer to this apparent contradiction is that the President has decided to give business the opportunity it has demanded—to revise the tax law, or rather permit its revision, just as business spokesmen have been urging.

Then, if business does not revive spectacularly, if it does not absorb millions of unemployed now on government rolls of one sort or another, the President can say to the country: "We gave them everything they said they needed—even things we knew they ought not to have, in order to test this thing thoroughly. Now we know that business CAN NOT or WILL NOT function in such a way as to take care of this situation. The government, perforce, must take care of these people. We cannot let them starve or freeze. And we will not support them by the demoralizing dole."

New Deal Starts All Over Again With Critics Stumped

So the New Deal starts all over again, with its critics deprived of the answer they have been making for at least four years—that business would revive if the government would just let it alone—knocked into a cocked hat.

If business should revive, the New Dealers figure that "reform" would merely be delayed until after the election. Actually they would like to see this, not because they do not believe their reforms are good, but because the present business situation has them considerably worried. They are just a little disturbed by the growing conclusion in the country, as evidenced first in the purges, then in the 1938 election, and more recently by polls, that the New Deal has not been so hot, in that it has added billions to the national debt while the number of unemployed apparently is as great as it was at the depth of the depression.

Good times next year would make a Democratic victory, both as to the presidency and as to congress, much more likely. In fact plenty of shrewd observers think the Democrats will have to fumble the ball rather badly to lose the next election if business is good and obviously growing better. Parties rarely lose elections in good times. It is economic distress, almost invariably, which beats the party in power, if one except the rare campaign in which some issue moves the people more deeply than their pocketbooks. Sometimes there is very little rhyme or reason in this, but it is generally true.

Moreover the Republicans are not in good shape, despite their astute leadership on Capitol Hill. They are hopelessly divided on issues. Even in congress this is apparent.

Now Frank Murphy Looms As New Deal White Hope

Attorney General Frank Murphy is looming more and more as the white hope of the New Deal for the presidential nomination next year if Franklin D. Roosevelt does not "choose" to run. Murphy is the third candidate to be trotted out by the hundred percenters. The first was Robert H. Jackson, now solicitor general. President Roosevelt was very anxious to have Jackson run for governor of New York, last year.

Had Jackson run and been elected, he would now be governor of New York, and in a position not only of being able to do things, and keep in the limelight, but of having carried the Empire state in a year which was not too good for the Democrats.

Of course, Jackson might not have been elected had Roosevelt prevailed on the leaders to nominate him, but the interesting thing at the moment is that the New York leaders turned thumbs down on him, and have never regretted their decision.

After Jackson's elimination—for it could scarcely be considered anything less—Harry L. Hopkins became the white hope of the New Deal. This movement involved also a bit of business appeasement. At the moment the New Dealers were rather thoroughly convinced that they must have a business revival if they were to be kept in power after next year.

Then Ill Health Put Harry Hopkins Out of Picture

Two things happened to that. No one is sure precisely which of the two was the chicken and which was the egg, but one was that Hopkins was out of the picture on account of his health, and that while he was out of the picture the spenders and business baiters climbed into the saddle again—and are still there as this is written.

Maybe if Hopkins had been well enough to fight for the program with regard to business he certainly stood for when he was seeking conformation as secretary of commerce things would have been different. Or maybe if the New Dealers had not become convinced that Harry's constitution would not permit the strain of running for the presidency things would have stayed put. It is difficult to tell. Perhaps even Roosevelt does not know the answer to that.

Be that as it may, most New Dealers will tell you confidentially that they do not think Hopkins' health permits his consideration for the candidacy next year.

Meanwhile Murphy is busily engaged not only in building himself up before the country, but in doing it in such a way as to overshadow the similar exploits of Thomas E. Dewey.

President Will Win Battle To Continue Spending Policy

President Roosevelt will win the battle he forecast in his address before the American Retail federation. The spending policy will continue, despite grumbling from conservative leaders, not only among the Republicans, but in the President's own party. There will be no reduction in the total taxes paid by business. In fact there is likely to be at least a small increase assuming that there is any tax revision at all. Some of the nuisance taxes on business may be repealed or revised, but if they are then the flat corporation income taxes will be boosted, so that the net effect will be to make successful companies pay more, though to ease the burden slightly on unsuccessful companies.

There will be no marked curtailment of government competition with business. Unemployed will continue to be aided by work relief instead of by a dole, and social security benefits will be greatly extended.

But in winning the battle Roosevelt runs a serious risk of losing the war. The chief reason why there will be no balancing of the budget, in fact increased spending, is not in sympathy on Capitol Hill with the President's economic theories, but the age-old desire for pork, and the necessity for logrolling to get it—hence bigger and bigger appropriations.

Roosevelt Has Pork on His Side for the Moment

This sentiment against spending and the New Deal economic policies is not strong enough, yet, apparently, to insure revision of government spending. But it would be tomorrow if the pork element could be eliminated. Thus Roosevelt has pork on his side, for the moment, but the bigger the pork spending the more eager will the congressmen be to swat the next Roosevelt spending proposal which is not sufficiently greased. The defeat by the senate of the Florida ship canal is a perfect example of this. The Florida senators did their utmost to include the Florida canal in a logrolling combination, and as a matter of fact had more success than appeared on the final roll call. But Sen. Arthur Vandenberg did such a good publicity job in branding this project that even Pat Harrison, whose state of Mississippi is interested in the canal, had to go to Sen. Claude Pepper and beg to be excused! Harrison had been making quite a play against spending. To have voted for this particular expenditure would have put him in an inconsistent position, to put it mildly.

All of which spells more strength for the conservatives at the convention next year which will nominate the Democratic candidate for President. It explains the enormous apparent popularity for John Nance Garner, despite Garner's cloistered vocal chords. It explains the utter collapse of incipient booms for every New Dealer who has been put forward as Roosevelt's possible successor.

It explains the desperate efforts of the President to win Sen. James F. Byrnes, who has been rather vocal about the government's spending policy.

Chamberlain's Umbrella The Truth at Last?

We in this country who do not make a practice of carrying an umbrella on all occasions have been somewhat puzzled about Mr. Chamberlain's famous rain-stick. There must be some sinister secret behind it, we feel. To enlighten us, a British correspondent reveals the following facts:

"Mr. Chamberlain's umbrella is actually a sword-stick, that is to say, the handle can be pulled out and a thin rapier withdrawn from the stem. Mr. Chamberlain is an expert fencer.

"The ribs of the umbrella can be removed and expanded at a moment's notice into a wire entanglement, behind which Mr. Chamberlain could take cover if charged by cavalry. The cover can quickly be converted into a sandbag and used either for a firing rest for the elbow, a pillow when sleeping on the veldt, or as a rifle rest.

"Dangling from the umbrella's middle is a black tassel in which messages may be hidden and dropped from an airplane when all other communications fail."

We Americans have a reputation for believing many things, but—we doubt if we can swallow this one!

The Better Way to Correct Constipation

One way to treat constipation is to endure it first and cure it afterward. The other way is to avoid having it by getting at its cause. So why not save yourself those dull headache days, plus the inevitable trips to the medicine chest, if you can do it by a simple common-sense "ounce of prevention"?

If your trouble, like that of millions, is due to lack of "bulk" in the diet, "the better way" is to eat Kellogg's All-Bran. This crunchy, toasted, ready-to-eat cereal has just the "bulk" you need. If you eat it every day—and drink plenty of water—you can not only get regular but keep regular, day after day and month after month! All-Bran is made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. Sold by every grocer.

OATMEAL MEAT PATTIES
See Recipe Below.

When the Allowance Is Low

Lucky is the homemaker who has tucked away on her pantry shelf a package or two of oatmeal, and in her recipe file a half-dozen clever suggestions for using it in her menus. For oatmeal is a quick change artist, and with a little ingenuity you can turn out a whole array of tempting, unusual dishes as delicious to eat as they are inexpensive to eat.

For example, have you ever tried making light, flavorful raisin muffins with oatmeal? Or have you used oatmeal in a thick, hearty vegetable soup to give it that "stick-to-the-ribs" quality so much to be desired for active families? Had you thought of using it to stretch the meat budget, by making a little meat go a long way in meat patties or meat loaf? You've used oatmeal for luscious, soft, chewy cookies, of course, but have you tried it for making the crust for a delectable apple pudding, or have you substituted it for nut meats in a rich-tasting torte?

You see, besides adding interest and variety to meals, and doing a first-class job of budget stretching, oatmeal may be trusted to add a large amount of low-cost food energy to the diet. Oatmeal, moreover, is an excellent source of vitamin B, modernly called thiamin. This vitamin is absolutely necessary to enable the body to transform food (especially carbohydrates) into muscular energy. Thiamin stimulates the appetite, too, and it helps in overcoming constipation, and acts as a prevention of nervousness.

Here, then, is a brand new series of carefully tested recipes, all of which contain oatmeal, all of which will be family favorites in your recipe box.

Oatmeal Apple Torte.

(Makes eight servings)

CRUST:

- 2 cups flour
- ¾ cup oatmeal (uncooked)
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 1 cup brown sugar
- ¾ cup butter (melted)

Combine the ingredients in the order in which they are listed. Reserve one cup of this mixture for the top. Pack the remainder into the bottom of an eight-inch square pan.

FILLING:

- 1 cup sugar
 - 2 tablespoons cornstarch
 - ¼ teaspoon salt
 - 1 cup water
 - 1 tablespoon butter
 - 1 teaspoon vanilla
 - 2 cups apples (pared and chopped)
- Combine the sugar, cornstarch and salt. Add the water and butter, and cook over a low flame for about 10 minutes, stirring frequently. Cool and add the vanilla and apples. Pour the filling over the crust, and cover with one cup of crust mixture reserved for this. Bake in a moderately slow oven (325 degrees) for about one hour. Serve warm with plain or whipped cream.

Oatmeal Raisin Muffins.

(Makes 16-18 small muffins)

- 1 cup general purpose flour
 - 4 teaspoons baking powder
 - ¾ teaspoon salt
 - 2 tablespoons sugar
 - 2 cups oatmeal
 - ½ cup seedless raisins
 - 1 egg
 - 1 cup milk
 - 3 tablespoons shortening (melted)
- Sift together the flour, baking powder, salt and sugar. Add oatmeal and the raisins. Beat the egg, add milk and melted shortening. Combine with dry ingredients and mix very lightly. Pour into greased muffin pans and bake in a hot oven (400 degrees) for approximately 20 minutes.

Vegetable Oatmeal Soup.

(Serves eight)

- 2 pounds soup bone (½ bone, ½ meat)
- 2 tablespoons fat
- 2 quarts water
- 4 teaspoons salt
- ¼ teaspoon pepper
- 2 cups tomatoes (canned)
- 1 cup carrots (cubed)
- ¼ cup onion (chopped)
- ½ cup celery (chopped)
- ½ cup oatmeal or 1 cup regular rolled oats (uncooked)

Remove part of meat from cracked soup bone, cut meat into cubes and brown lightly in hot fat. Place meat, soup bone, water, salt and pepper in soup kettle. Cover tightly and simmer approximately two hours. Cool, strain, and chill sufficiently so that excess fat may be skimmed off. There should be 6½ cups of soup stock. Return stock to kettle and add vegetables. Bring to a boil, then slowly add oatmeal. Cover and simmer approximately ½ hour, or until vegetables are tender. Soup meat used in making the stock may be cut in small pieces and added. Serve with finely chopped parsley, if desired.

Old-Fashioned Oatmeal Cookies.

(Makes five dozen)

- ¾ cup shortening
- 1½ cups dark brown sugar
- 1½ cups general purpose flour
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ½ teaspoon soda
- 3 cups oatmeal
- ¾ cup sour milk
- 1 teaspoon vanilla

Cream the shortening and sugar thoroughly. Sift together the flour, salt, and soda, and combine with oatmeal. Add to the creamed mixture, alternately, with the milk. Stir in the vanilla. Roll out to ¼-inch thickness on a lightly floured board. Cut into 2½-inch rounds with a floured cookie cutter. Bake on a greased cookie sheet in a moderately hot oven (375 degrees) for about 10 minutes.

Meat Patties.

(Serves six)

- 6 slices bacon
 - ¾ pound beef (ground)
 - ¾ pound pork (ground)
 - 1 egg (beaten)
 - 1 tablespoon onion (chopped)
 - 1 cup tomatoes (canned or fresh)
 - ¼ cup milk
 - ½ cup oatmeal
 - ¾ teaspoon salt
 - Dash of pepper
- Line six muffin tins with strips of bacon. Combine remaining ingredients and mix well. Put into the muffin tins. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for approximately one hour.

As a Breakfast Food.

Modern homemakers serve oatmeal porridge often and for variety add chopped dates, figs, seedless raisins, or dried prunes or apricots (cut in strips) while cooking.

All's Well

By SMITH JONES
(Released by Associated Newspapers WNU Service.)

HERBERT POLKE left the elevator and walked slowly toward the office of his friend, Adolph Getz. Rita, Adolph's widowed sister, would be there; Rita, in neat dark dress with tasty collar and cuffs, reminiscent of days when such accessories were worn by charming girls. If Adolph were in he would be at his desk nodding in his chair, and both he and Rita would be serene in their confidence that they were important cogs in the business machine.

Rita looked up as the door opened. "Good morning, Herbert; Adolph is not in." Then, as she caught sight of his face, "Why, Herbert, what's the matter?"

"You do not get it, Herbert? What do you mean? Why not?"

"I will not get any money. Philip just told me so. He says Judge Dedham says the tax will be more than a thousand dollars."

"But Herbert," she protested, "how can the tax on a thousand dollars be more than a thousand dollars?"

"Oh, Rita," he burst out in despair, "if Henry had only left me just a thousand dollars; but he left me the amount of all my notes he held, and then a thousand dollars more, and Philip added in interest on them all, and the tax on that is more than a thousand dollars." His voice rose. "I will never get into the home now—never!"

Rita stared at him stupefied. "So that is the way it is," she muttered to herself, "So that is it."

Her mind went back to the day two months before when Henry Arndt in his last illness had called her and Adolph to him.

"Herbert wants to get into the home," he had said, "and with a thousand dollars more he can do it. The Polkes live long—perhaps it is best."

And then the three had discussed ways and means; and, too methodical to consider destroying the notes which represented gifts to the lovable and beloved spendthrift, they finally decided to leave him the necessary thousand dollars over all that he owed the sick man. And so the will was drawn, and now the tax on what was intended to be a legacy of $1,000 was, through faulty wording of the will, more than the legacy itself.

Rita raised her eyes, swimming in tears. "Oh, Herbert; if I had only known. It is all my fault!"

"Your fault?" he protested indignantly. "Your fault? Why, you are the only real friend I have had since mother died; and you were right to refuse me—40 years ago, Rita, 40 years! You could not have made me over; I would have dragged you down, too; but I will never cease to regret."

"Herbert," she began briskly, "if you mean that, it can all come out right yet." Then, in answer to his bewildered look: "You want me to marry you now, is that it?"

"No, Rita," protested the man, bewildered. "How could I ask you, now?"

"With just five words, Herbert," she persisted, laughing, but with crimson face, and hurried on. "You know I have a good home alone and more than enough to live on."

He looked at her gravely for a moment. Then: "Rita, will you marry me?" he asked.

So two days later, when the matter came up before the probate court, Rita and Adolph stood with him in the bare courtroom and heard young Philip Arndt testify to the amount of the notes due the estate, to the interest and the costs; then the tax was computed. It was $1,054.

"Is that satisfactory to you, Herbert?" asked the judge kindly.

"It is just," said the old man, simply. "And it is satisfactory."

The judge gave him an approving smile. "All right, then; let the record show that the legacy to Herbert Polke is fixed by agreement in open court at $10,540. Now, Mr. Polke, how do you wish the balance coming to you to be paid?"

Again he smiled, and Rita looked at him in entreaty. Surely so kindly a man would not make such a heartless joke!

"Yes," he said in answer to her look, "there will be quite a balance. You see," he continued as they still stared at him open-mouthed, "all but two of those notes are barred by the statute and cannot be set off against the legacy, though they may be used to fix the amount of the legacy. Mr. Arndt assumed that, but he is wrong. There will be something over $8,000 coming to you."

Philip Arndt was the first to recover his voice. "I object," he shouted.

The judge's smile died. "The legacy has been fixed by the court at the amount asked by you," he said sternly, "and it will not be changed."

Herbert Polke whispered to Rita, who nodded brightly; then he turned to the angry boy. "Never mind, Philip," he said. "I will take just the thousand dollars your father intended I should have, and you shall make the check payable to Rita; and Judge Dedham shall marry us at once, and then everything will be settled."

AROUND THE HOUSE

For High Windows.—High windows appear shorter if the hangings are looped back with a slight curve and tied somewhat below the middle.

Keeping Dried Beef.—Dried beef will keep better if stored in a covered glass jar in the refrigerator rather than wrapped in parchment or waxed paper.

When Making Egg Sandwiches.—Scramble the egg instead of boiling it. Not only are more sandwiches made, but they are more easily digested.

Tea Towels.—Add a little borax to the water when washing tea towels. It removes dirt and grease and makes the towels a good color. It also acts as a disinfectant.

Loose Casters.—When casters on furniture drop out too often, remove them, pour melted wax in the holes and insert the casters before the wax hardens. After it has set the casters will not fall out again.

How to Recondition Sponges.—Sponges that are left with soap still in them soon become slimy. They can be reconditioned by soaking for 30 minutes in a mixture of half vinegar and half water. Rinse out in warm water, then in cold, and leave in the sun to dry.

After Washing Silver.—Stand silver in a jug of very hot water to which a little ammonia has been added, and it will remain bright much longer.

Classifying Dessert Lists.—Dessert lists kept in the cookbook are a help in menu making, especially when they are classified as "hearty," "light," "quick," "good for several days," "oven made," and "for children."
